Encouraging Words

As parents it can be very hard to know what to say to our children before and after they skate at a competition – we have to be conscious of our words, our tone, our body language, our facial expressions (and probably lots more).

Here are a few words that may assist you:

Before a competition	After a competition
You've worked incredibly hard for this moment. Trust your training and have confidence in your abilities.	We are so proud of the hard work and dedication you put into your performance. You were amazing out there!
Remember to breathe, stay focused, and enjoy every moment on the ice. You've got this!	No matter the result, your resilience and grace on the ice inspire us. You're a winner in our eyes.
Skate with your heart and soul. Your passion for skating shines through every move you make.	The experience you gained from this competition is invaluable. Use it to fuel your growth and passion for skating
Believe in yourself. You've prepared diligently, and now its time to show everyone what you're capable of.	You showed incredible courage and determination today. Your commitment is admirable.
The most important thing is to skate your best and have fun. We're proud of you no matter what happens.	Your performance was fantastic. Remember, every competition is a stepping stone to greater achievements. Keep pushing and reaching for your goals.
Parents please refrain from providing technical feedback – trust us, your skater knows they didn't fully rotate a jump or didn't get in enough rotations on a spin and their coach is equipped to handle this – that is why you pay them. Your job as a parent to be supportive and encouraging at all times!
Remember, support and encouragement are vital for young athletes. Encouraging words from parents can significantly impact a skater's confidence and mindset before and after their competitions
